TEACHING CHARITY BY CHART

TABLES THAT APPEAL TO THOSE AT THE CROWDED CITY SHOW.

Graphic Illustration of the Half Time Classes That Make a Quicker Appeal Than Columns of Type-Not All of Them Illustrate the Dark Side.

A greatly increased number of persons are daily attending the exhibition of congestion of population in New York in the Museum of Natural History, and yesterday afternoon there was a question of conges-tion to be considered while you waited. The subject of the exhibit would draw no such crowds if the manner of it were not to graphic. This one could easily determine by observing the groups about different exhibits. One, for example, which has always a crowd before it is a silhouette stretched across a wide window showing a line of children, which an inscription explains thus:

This line of children represents 1-5000 of the children (in the city of New York) on part school time. All the children on part time would reach 26% miles. The further these children are from school the nearer they are to the policeman.

At the head of the line of thirteen children is a teacher standing on the steps of a schoolhouse. The children nearest her appeal to enter, but her uplifted hands forbid them. A group further from her are idle, then two boys are fighting, and the last two are playing craps, but an impending policeman is about to capture

All that that little picture and caption tells is told elaborately in leaflets which visitors pick up or take from the hand of an attendant, and stuff into their pockets indifferently.

So it is with scores of subjects which the exhibit is designed to bring to thoughtful consideration of visitors. The story graphically told is followed with intense interest; the story told in words falls on listless ears.

Another popular set of silhouettes which particularly appeals to matrons gives the average height and weight deduced from measurement and weighing of 7,511 boys and 9,302 girls who live in tenements of one, two, three or four rooms. Take a row of silhouettes representing the naked bodies of four boys, each 5 years old, and the nearby scale shows that such dwellers in one room tenements average 39 inches tall and weigh 37.2 pounds; in two room tenements the figures are 39.9 inches, and 38.6 pounds; three rooms, 40.7 inches, 39.5 pounds; four room, 41.4 inches and 40.1 Approximately the same progressive increase in stature and weight is shown in the series representing girls of the same age. There is the whole story of a fat and uninteresting pamphlet told at a glance; the less space the child has at home the shorter and thinner the child is. It makes subscribers for some anti-congestion movement without a word being spoken or a page read.

The society, which tries to better the conditions of work and the wages of sweatshop laborers, has a series of exhibitions which are eloquent. Your attention to the general problem is called by a large card inscribed "Laws regulating home work do not prevent employment of children or restrict hours of women's or children's home work."

This is effective only in sharpening attention to what follows. First is a display of many finished articles made in the tenement houses, as, for example, a dozen men's neckties, bright new silk, the kind which sell for $1.50 each in the shop. A sign tells you that home workers get 55 cents a dozen for lining and hand sewing the ties. It is a high unit rate, but the work is difficult and slow, and the average wage of the workers is $4 a week.

Now you are getting interested in the Now you are getting interested in the problem and pass on with more understanding to a group of large photographs showing the home workers as they are found at their tasks. But photographs are deceptive; they do not always convey an accurate idea of spaces, of physical conditions. But this idea is accurately conveyed in the next exhibit in the series.

reyed in the next exhibit in the series.

Here is a reproduction with "real properties," as the stage folk say, of a tenement room $x8 feet, in which seven persons—a mother and six children—are engaged in making artificial roses. Excellent choice of work! All in the room is real except the figures of the workers, which may have been supplied by the artist of the Eden Musée. This room contains eight chairs or stools, a table (around which all the rosemakers sit or stand), a common kitchen table, a three-quarters iron bed on which is thrown a collapsible iron crib. on which is thrown a collapsible iron crib, and a washstand. The workers' outer clothes hang over the foot of the bed or

Next to this is shown the same room at night. The collapsible crib has been expanded and two children are asleep in it, the three-quarters bed is occupied by the mother and two children, and the work table and washetened drawn close work table and washstand drawn close together make a bed for two more. Not all of the exhibition is designed to show conditions which Gov. Hughes pro-nounced "intolerable." Improvements are noted as well. Large models show whole blocks of existing tenements built under the requirements of the new law. These the requirements of the new law. These show at a glance that such tenements do not exclude light and air from their inmates; that their public hallways are light and ventilated. By the side of that model is another of one of the many still intact which were built under the old law, in which ten out of fourteen rooms on each floor were dark and unventilated; in which the halls were dark and narrow and the "courts" mere air wells twenty-eight inches wide mere air wells twenty-eight inches wide with no means of ventilating them at the bottom. Such a comparative exhibition gives heart to the visitors; they know that agitation and work have accomplished something—and they join another anti-congestion society.

A chart shows a "bad air block." Blocks of color, deep purple, rise and fall in height on a large map, and you learn that the tower of purple represents the death rate from acute respiratory diseases in that bad air block of children under 5 years of age -43 per 1,000. Another chart shows how many children per thousand 5 years of age or under die in that block -92.2. Strangers to New York, of whom there are many among the visitors, look at these charts and read that the block with the ghastly record is bounded by Prince, East Houston, Mott and Elizabeth streets.

"Where is that awful block?" they ask, with frightened eyes. "Where are such hideous conditions permitted?"

"It is near Police Headquarters," some

The will of Dr. Clark W. Dunlop, who died a few days ago, after a Sheriff's jury had declared him insane, was filed for probate yesterday. It contains provisional bequests to charitable and religious purposes amounting to $150,000. The estate was estimated in the lunacy proceedings at between $650,000 and $1,000,000. The will was made in 1903, before Dr. Dunlop had become a victim to senile dementia, which attacked him a couple of years ago. By it a fund of $150,000 is created for the benefit of the widow, Eliza Dunlop, on condition that she shall not On her death or remarriage the fund is to be split up into two sums, one of $100,000 to go to the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church and another of $50,000 to be divided church and another of $50,000 to be divided in equal shares between the Young Women's Christian Association, the Bible and Fruit Mission of the Public Hospitals, the Children's Aid Society and the American Female Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless, all of New York city:

A. F. OF L. TO TALK POLITICS. Labor Leaders to Meet in Washington on Wednesday Next/ The local unions affiliated with the Amerian Federation of Labor received official copies of a call yesterday for a special national and international unions in Washington on Wednesday to settle on the future the A. F. of L. The federation has a membership, according to its records, of more than 2,000,000 in a hundred or more national and international unions, and the president of each or a substitute will attend the conference, as well as a large number of delegates from the local branches. The meeting, the call says, will be one of the most important in its results ever held in the history of the A. F. of L.

In a statement made last evening Herman Robinson, the Eastern representative of President Gompers of the A. F. of L., said that the issuing of the call for the meeting meant that matters so important are to be considered that President Gompers and the executive council desire before taking them up to have instructions re-garding them from all the unions, and It is impossible to say now whether the conference is likely to result in a decision among other things to take independent political action, but it was in anticipation of this conference that I made the proposition to the Central Federated Union on Sunday to postpone until April 1 action on the question of calling on the executive council of the Federation to order a national convention to take up the question of political action in order to see what the conference will decide. That proposition was agreed to. The immediate cause for the calling of the conference was the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Danbury hat and other abor cases, but the entire events of the year ill be reviewed and a complete programme for the future, affecting the 2,000,000 members of the Federation, decided on. It goes without saying that the question of independent political action will come up, but in what form I could not predict. The matter of taking independent political action is one which I would not like to express an opinion

AN INVENTOR KILLED BY GAS.

John Burry, electrical engineer of the Stock Quotation Telegraph Company and inventor and manufacturer of the Burry printing-telegraph system in use by that company, was asphyxiated by gas early yesterday morning at his home at Rosebank Staten Island.

Mr. Burry went to bed at 11:30 o'clock on Wednesday night, telling his wife to awaken him at 7 o'clock yesterday, as he was going to New York and Philadelphia. He slept alone in a room on the second floor of the house, which is the old Bachman mansion. In the room was a combination jet for gas and electricity. The electric light was burning when Mr. Burry was in the room Wednesday evening preparing for bed. It is supposed that in turning off the electric gurrent he accidentally turned on the gas.

ourrent he accidentally turned on the gas.

Mr. Burry was born at Friburg, Switzerland, forty-seven years ago. He came to the United States when he was 19 years old and devoted himself to electrical study and work. His specialty became printing-telegraphy, in which line at his death he was esteemed a great expert. Mr. Burry installed the printing-telegraph plants in Rio Janeiro and Buenos Ayres about twenty years ago. In 1892 he associated himself with the Stock Quotation Telegraph Company. The funeral will be held on Saturday.

SCHOONER HITS COAL BARGE. Six Master Bumps the Schuylkill and Both Are Badly Damaged.

BOSTON, March 12 .- As the result of a ollision last evening off Cape Cod between the six masted schooner Mertie B. Crowley, outward bound for Baltimore, and the coal laden barge Schuylkill the latter vessel reached Provincetown this morning leaking badly, with her pumps constantly in operation to prevent sinking.

The tug Conestoga, from Philadelphia, was bringing into port the barges Paxtang and Schuylkill. About 6 last evening, of North Truro, the Crowley came down the Cape shore and struck the Schuylkill a terrific blow, knocking her deck house from its position and causing the barge to begin leaking.

The Conestoga anchored the Paxtang and under a full head of steam started for Provincetown with the Schuylkill.

The latter vessel was in danger of sinking. but the tug succeeded in getting her into Provincetown harbor, where she could be grounded on the mud. The Crowley was also damaged in the crash. She anchored off Nauset, evidently clearing away the wreckage, and at 9:15 this morning she started southward.

COFFIN TOO BIG TO CARRY. So They Lowered It With Block and Tackie From Sixth Story.

A crowd gathered at Ninth avenue and Fifty-third street last night to watch the funeral of Mrs. Margaret Morgan, who died yesterday at her home, at 104 West Fifty-third street. She weighed over 300 pounds, and it was necessary to lower the coffin from a sixth story window in order to get it out of the house.

The coffin itself weighed several hundred pounds, and was taken up stairs in pieces. When the undertaker found that he couldn't on 191.66 revolutions per minute.

Mr. Bowles said he had no expectation of beating the record of the Chester because the latter had turbine engines.

COULDN'T REPLY TO GOV. FORT

evernor Had Told the Congregationalis Conference Enforcement of Present Excise Laws Should Precede Local Option-Dr. Seudder's Reply Cut Short.

The Rev. John L. Scudder, Jersey City's boxing parson," was foiled yesterday afternoon in an attempt to "put on the gloves" with Gov. J. Franklin Fort of New Jersey after the latter's address on proposed temperance legislation, now agitat ing the Apple Jack State, at the windup of an all day session of the Northern New Persey Congregational Conference in the Waverly Congregational Church, Jersey City. He had just got nicely going on the subject of the Governor's views when the moderator called him to order. A little later the lid was further put down on Dr. Scudder's local option opinions by a unanimous vote on a sudden motion to adjourn.

At the morning session the conference adopted a resolution indorsing the efforts of the Anti-Saloon League to obtain the passage of the local option bill, which it considered "a just measure, demanding the American right of home rule in local affairs." This gave the Governor his cue and Dr. Scudder and the rest of the congregation listened to him with much interest

The Governor began by saying that he was not opposed to local option, but believed first in the enforcement of the existing excise laws and the enactment later of other laws further regulating the liquor traffic.

"We have been talking about this glorious republic of ours and its great system and forgetting the man, the individual," he said. "Women are generally to be found on the right side of a moral quesconference of representatives of all its tion, and I really believe the women of New Jersey elected me. I don't mean to be false to either the men or the women policies of organized labor as represented in if God gives me the power. The individual man should do his duty."

The Governor said that he only had the power to suggest legislation and veto or approve bills, and added: "Remember that the power behind the Legislature is not always speaking for righteousness. "I said in my canvass," he continued, that I would obey the Constitution and did not propose to interfere with the Legislature. I am not a boss. I don't believe in the boss system in the State or in poliin the boss system in the State or in politics. I am going to be responsible to no man; only to my conscience and to my God.

"You are in a position to accomplish great things in this State if you don't try to undertake too much and destroy what you are trying to do. This is a powerful thing [the liquor traffic]. You can resolute and all that, but unless you exert your power and influence all the time you will not succeed. When you are asleep the other man is at work. He never ceases to marshal the evil powers; never, day or night. Let the individual citizen believe in what is right. Don't criticise a man in what is right. Don't criticise a man you believe is doing what he thinks to be you believe is doing what he thinks to be right.

"Lots of people are shouting against the present President. There is not a man in the United States but believes he is an Aonest man and has an honest belief at heart. I differ with him in several things. I'm not going to criticise him. I'm going to stand behind him and hold up his hands."

Dr. Scudder is an out and out local optionist and says he doesn't care who knows it. He recently sent two letters to Gov. Fort telling him what would happen to him and the State legislators if they didn't give the church folks what they were after. He never had the pleasure of meeting the Governor until yestercay.

were after. He never had the pleasure of meeting the Governor until yestercay. When the Governor finished talking the parson arose to start off what the programme called a "discussion."

"I am very glad," he said, "to hear the Governor say that he is not opposed to local option. We have been trying for some time to get him to express himself."

Then the moderator called the speaker to order by saying that the "discussions

Governor's speech.

The Chief Executive signified that he would be pleased to hear what Dr. Scudder had to say, but the moderator held the lid down and the minister quietly and grace fully subsided.

At the close of the session Dr. Scudder and Gov. Fort shook hands as if they were and Gov. Fort shook hands as it they were really and truly delighted to meet each other and the dominie said "I was very glad to hear you say that men should become active. That's just exactly what we're going to do. We're going into politics and we're going to hustle for all we are worth."

"I like men of nerve who are not afraid to say what they think," returned the Governor. "Pleased to have met you."

DOUBLE FUNERAL IN BROOKLYN.

Robert Manners, Old Division Street Book seller, Dies Six Hours After His Wife. Robert Manners and his wife, Caroline

Louise Manners, each 87 years old, died within six hours of each other on Tuesday night at their home, 575 Monroe street, Brooklyn, and there will be a double funeral from the house to-day.

The couple had been greatly distressed The couple had been greatly distressed over the death of a daughter last summer and became much enfeebled from constant grieving over their loss. All through her last illness, extending over seven weeks, Mr. Manners spent nearly all his time at the bedside of his wife. Ten days ago he broke down and also had to take to his bed. Then both began to fail rapidly, and at 10:45 o'clock on Tuesday night the wife passed away and just six hours later the husband died. husband died.

The couple came from England sixty years ago, and in 1846 Mr. Manners opened a little bookstore at 114 Division street, New York, and ran it for more than forty years. Two sons, eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild survive.

WOODROW WILSON TO BOYS.

Princeton President Addresses Students in Chicago Preparatory Schools.

CHICAGO, March 12 .- President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton, on his first visit to Chicago in several years, began his day's work by giving students of the Chi-cago Latin School and the University School for Boys advice on the subject of good citizenship, a subject he did not forget to refer to in his formal address tonight as the guest of honor at the annual dinner of the Princeton Club of Chicago. Marry early, have ideals and cherish them, cultivate the spirit of service, and remember that the citizen owes a great deal to the country and its institutions was the gist of the advice given to the young-
